On February 29, 2016, Jenny Ryan (43) was taken ill and underwent emergency gall bladder removal surgery. Her bile duct was damaged during the procedure. After several failed attempts to repair the tissue, Jenny was sent to Strong Memorial Hospital in Rochester, NY.

Jenny went septic shortly after arriving and was put into Intensive Care in a medically induced coma, and has been on life support of various types. Jenny has undergone many surgeries, blood transfusions, etc. Jenny is making baby steps forward to recovery. (UPDATED 9/12/16) Jenny is 178 days into this ordeal and still at Strong Memorial. She is building strength and pushing through she gets stronger every day.

Jenny has years of rehab ahead of her to get back to the Jenny we know. The doctors informed us that if Jenny had not been in such good physical condition at the time, she would not have survived.

Jenny is a very warm, loving young lady. She is the first person there if you need a helping hand. When we asked her if we could do this, she said yes, but would like to be there to thank everyone. With God's help, we hope she will be.

Thank you for your support.
